LOS ANGELES, ON ELECTION EVE, IN FERMENT OVER CONFESSION OF THE McNAMARAS

Fate of Murderers Forgotten in Blow They Have Struck at Cause of Organized Labor, Whose Enemies Rejoice—Brothers Alone Cool and Collected.

Los Angeles, Dec. 2.—James B. McNamara blew up the Los Angeles Times and destroyed 21 innocent lives one year ago last October 1.

John J. McNamara planned the placing of the dynamite that wrecked the Llewellyn Iron Works last Christmas day.

Without a tremor of emotion, the brothers confessed their crime in open court yesterday.

They will be sentenced Tuesday. James probably will be sentenced to San Quentin prison for the remainder of his life. John expects to get off with a 20-year sentence.

The prosecution says the end is not yet; that the sensations in the case have only begun.

It is declared that a number of men have been under surveillance both here and in Indianapolis for several weeks, and that as soon as the Indianapolis grand jury meets other arrests will follow.

Enemies of organized labor all over the country are triumphant. They hope the confession of the McNamaras is the death blow to unionism.

The leaders of organized labor
